Graduate American and New England Studies Glickman Family Library, Portland - Individual quiet study rooms, not group study, would be helpful. The room is a quiet and comfortable place for students to study in a central location, the library unfortunately is not central. Bedford street divides the campus. I am frequent user of ILLIAD. I wish we had direct access to more journals. I'd like to be able to import references in a standard formate from PUBMED, instead of copy and paste, copy and paste, for each heading (author, title, etc).

Graduate American and New England Studies Glickman Family Library, Portland It would be nice if the library open earlier on Sundays. For group projects, we have been forced to meet elsewhere in order to return to college 25 years after receiving my BA, I was technologically challenged to say the least. The Glickman staff and the computer sites made library literacy not very embarrassing.

Graduate Applied Science, Engineering, and Technology Glickman Family Library, Portland I found that I work much better at the library than at home. I usually use the Glickman or the law library in Portland. The law library is beautiful, too! The law library could use a renovation, but it is very quiet. My only complaint is that there should be a printer for the computer on the 4th floor or the computer on the 4th floor at the Glickman library. I'd like to be able to drink a cup of coffee in the stacks or at least parts of every floor at the Glickman Library. As long as I can't do that, my time in the library will be limited, which is a big disappointment, actually. I love studying in a library...I can also be trusted to be responsible with a beverage. As at the New York Public Library reading room, for example. I use the Library cafe almost exclusively when I'm at the library...and it's not very nice, I have to admit. If you can improve that area, or expand areas where one could drink coffee or tea within the library, it would be awesome. (If I am misinformed, and I can actually take coffee of the cafe area, my apologies...I'll double check when I'm there tomorrow :-)

Graduate Education and Human Development Glickman Family Library, Portland The staff at both the Portland and Gorham libraries have been extremely helpful to me. They bend over backwards to help me find what I need. Regarding my less than "right answers on this survey": The Gorham library is ugly--and uncomfortable for studying. And I'm still sometimes confused about the different login ids I need for the library/informational resources and also for logging in from home. It would be nice if all the login information could be the same instead of having separate illiad, blackboard, and student ids logins. Also, it would be great if USM could subscribe to the online database JSTOR--or make it easier to access. I haven't been able to actually retrieve an article from JSTOR, though I've tried many times. And also, I am surprised that the library isn't open 24 hours?? Maybe there isn't demand--but since my classes end at 10p.m. sometimes I'd like to go to the library for awhile afterwards and get my studying done then. THANKS!

I have had one experience where the Gorham library acted annoyed when a graduate student was working with was talking about our project in the area that is designated okay for such talk. I was confused by this reaction and I wonder if posting the rules more openly or in bigger lettering would help this to not happen again.

I feel that the folks in the library are knowledgeable and caring. However, they do not reach everyone in teaching how to use the available resources. Further, URSUS, ERIC, and other key search engines are frequently down, and 95% of the time when I have found a listing in ERIC, it says that it does not have the full text article available.

I find the day-to-day operations of Glickman and the Gorham library facilitated by people at the circulation desks, inter-library loan, and reference, excellent. It is clear that for the most part these people love their job, know their business, and genuinely want to provide whatever assistance they can, in spite of the library's holdings.

Staff are always ready to help, which I greatly appreciate, but they also let me go on individually and do things myself. The only improvement is the acoustics of the Gorham library--you can hear EVERYTHING and its so open that's not always conducive to quiet and intimate, comfortable studying. I wish the university could provide more money to give students private study rooms that do not have fluorescent lights and are a bit more intimate.

I do wish that there were more areas within the library for quiet study time. Though I know that library staff are very busy, I wish that they would circulate more to be able to quiet others who are having distracting louder-than-should-be conversation, as they do not always respect reminders from a peer.

I really do find the holdings of the library systems limited and limiting, but I am used to the Harvard and BU library systems and know the UM system just doesn't have the $5. (This background means my needs are minimal for additional information-seeking instruction.) I did my undergraduate work at Wichita State University, and expected the USM system libraries to be at least as good, but have been disappointed by the holdings.

The set up for printing is not user friendly. Too many steps are required from to in to adding money to a card to going back in and figuring out how to print or save to print later. Not worth the effort! Most students work around it as all possible, by going else where. If you had copier near the librarians desk, and a pay cash per page system as an option your library might get more use. After I finally figured out, I tried to help many others in class at the library and before I get to the third step they say: forget it, this is way to complicated! The "FORT KNOX" type password and credit card system creates an unfriendly environment of distrust.

The library as a writing area is inadequate. I used the desk man and the library. Noise levels are high. Portions of buildings are cold. I think that if you request an item from the library through interlibrary loan you should not be denied because they have it available in the library. The whole point of searching online is to have the information available to you, not immediately than with a reasonable amount of time. So because the Glickman library has the text available I have to drive 50 miles to Portland to get it rather than have it sent to me electronically. Doesn't make sense!!

There was something wrong with the computer that day, and she was not helpful at all. She didn't seem to want to get out of her chair to physically help me find a book, so I wandered through the library and finally found what I needed. The CD collection should be cataloged via Library of Congress call number, also, I think that the collection should be behind the counter so that it would always be in order, nothing would be missing, and everyone someday wants to listen to a CD, (even if only inside the library) it should be checked out. It is real frustrating as a graduate trying to locate CDs which the online catalog says it's checked in, but it is no where to be found. We should receive notice when another student cancels a loan. overall, I think that the library is an inviting place to find information.
I think the library should offer classes on Endnotes and other software provided on campus computers. Throughout the semester!!!

I am just beginning to be aware of the great depth of research articles available in the Glickman Library and books the Library offers. I learned about a recent presentation that a librarian did for our PPM 602 class, at the request of our professor, Michael Lahti. Almost all the class attended this 40-minute presentation which opened my eyes to lots of services I did not know about. I expect to be using the library even more. Perhaps you would regularly schedule this kind of orientation and shorter presentations on specific tools and services you offer.

The service is good. I do think that the 7th floor users need to respect the quite space provided by the library. Both the conference room users and users of the quiet room.

The fact that the entire campus shuts down during holidays is very annoying. Graduate work does not end vacation.

My only real complaints are the hours the library is open. I don't think a university library should ever be closed, but I think it should open until at least 12:00AM.

There are many computer is very convenient. I will always be grateful for the decision to allow graduate students to take out books for a full semester!!!!

I am very nice. Sometimes equipment I need, such as copiers, are not working or are not working with i.d. cards.

I love the Glickman Library in Portland, it's a terrific space and the staff have always been helpful.

The number one item on my wish list for the library is better online full access to journal articles in my field (Ecology, particularly Ecology). For instance JSTOR would be a great (if expensive) addition to the current services as that would provide access to journal articles (in full-text) available for my research needs in Public Policy (accessed from off-site).

I find the online articles key and interlibrary loan extremely handy. Extreemly dated books on mathematics/statistics

I am recommending seeking ways to increase subscriptions to databases and journals. Disregard my answers, I just wanted to be able to submit this message to you.

I find the online journal is difficult on-campus. I understand there are licensing issues, but it would be helpful to have more "live links" from off-campus locations. As a commuter student this would be especially helpful.

PROBLEMS have been related to technology, not library staff.

The on-line index resource is unacceptable poor. I am often informed that an on-text of a journal article does not exist, only to find later that it does if I follow a Byzantine path to -- or am told that it does, only to find that it does not. On the other hand, interlibrary loan works well. I have occasionally been treated rudely at the front desk, but on the other hand, are very nice. Sometimes equipment I need, such as copiers, are not working or are not working with i.d. cards.

<td>I am a law student using the Garrech library, which is cold, ugly and at times loud. There are too few outlets in the place, and at 5'2&quot; my feet dangle when I sit in the chairs, which is uncomfortable.</td>

<td>I have not used the library on campus much. Staff has been helpful and friendly. I did have a problem with using it and name change and staff was not sure what to do. It took awhile. I mostly use it online and would like more journal full-texts to be available.</td>
